To the Electors of Allegheny County.

FELLOW CITIZENS.

FROM solicitations of a number of my friends, I am induced to offer myself a candidate for the office of SHERIFF, at the ensuing election. Should you think me worthy of the trust, no exertions on my part shall be wanting to fill the office with fidelity, to the best of my abilities.

I am, gentlemen, your ob'dt. serv't,

JAMES CROSSAN.

March 12, 1819.

To the Electors of Allegheny county.

AS I have been placed before the public as a candidate for the office of SHERIFF at our next election, with my full approbation, and as hints have been given in some parts of the county, that I had given up the idea of standing a poll, I consider it a duty I owe myself to state this publicly, that I have not declined. The duties of a very confining business have prevented me from making that personal declaration to my fellow citizens, which has become usual on these occasions, yet I trust, that as my whole life has been passed in this county, sufficient information as to my qualifications or unfitness for the office, may be easily acquired by any individual who may think fit to make the enquiry. If the citizens of Allegheny shall think proper to favor me with their voice on the day of election, I shall feel highly gratified, for more reasons than one; if another of the candidates be preferred to me, I shall acquiesce without a murmur, convinced that every member of our society ought to exercise independenly, the full right of suffrage.

Your humble serv't.

MORGAN NEVILLE.

Pittsburgh, July 6.

To the Electors of Allegheny County;

FELLOW CITIZENS—As I have been placed before the public as a candidate for the office of SHERIFF at our next election, with my full approbation, I now state publicly that I have determined to stand the poll, and do hereby solicit your votes. The necessary attention to my business through these times of difficulty, has hitherto prevented me from making that personal declaration to you, which has become so usual on such occasions; yet I trust that as my whole life has been passed in this county, and as I once had the honor of serving you in the Sheriff's Office, sufficient information as to my qualifications may be easily acquired. If the citizens of Allegheny county should favor me with their voice on the day of election, I shall remember with gratitude this mark of public confidence.

WM. M'CANDLESS.

July 16.

Tothe Electors of Allegheny County;

Fellow Citizens.

NOTWITHSTANDING the repeated assertions of some that I had declined standing a pole altogether; and of others that I had suffered my name to be mentioned merely for the purpose of promoting the election of a favorite candidate: I now candidly and honestly assure you that I mean to be one of the disinterested twelve who have solicited your votes. In short it would be no small gratification to me to be your next sheriff. I, in the mean time, fully convinced that you will exercise your judgement on the occasion, remain whether successful or unsuccessful

Your Fellow Citizen,

WILLIAM LECKY.

Pittsburgh, July 16.

To the Electors of Allegheny County;

FELLOW CITIZENS—My name has appeared amongst a number of others in the public prints of this place, as a candidate for the office of SHERIFF, at the next election, and as I have been well assured that when I was spoken of at a political meeting lately held, it was publicly stated that I had declined standing a poll for that office, I think it right to mention that as I did not offer myself at first, neither did I ever say or hint to any person that I intended to decline. The compliment of having been mentioned by my fellow-citizens in that way, is too flattering to be lightly treated—But as it is the privilege of every citizen to exercise his own judgement on the day of election, I should think solicitation would be rather offensive than pleasing, and will therefore only observe, that I feel grateful for being put in nomination, and shall be highly so if successful.

I am yours very respectfully,

JAMES B. OLIVER.

To the Electors of Allegheny County;

Friends and Fellow Citizens.—

FOR the first time in my life I appear before you as a candidate for office, should you deem me capable and worthy of your confidence I solicit your suffrages at the ensuing election for the office of SHERIFF, for Allegheny county; pledging myself, should I be elected, to discharge the duties of the office with impartiality.

WITHOUT DEDUCTION.

To draw THREE times a week, and 1000 numbers each day. Prizes payable without deduction, Sixty days after the drawing is completed, at the Camden Bank.

25,000 Tickets at 10 Dols.

INTERNAL NAVIGATION, the object of the above scheme, must be allowed by all, to be of the highest importance to these United States and every good citizen must feel himself deeply interested on every intimation of undertakings, having Internal Improvement in view, being set on foot, and be desirous of aiding according to his abilities, towards the promotion thereof.

Under these impressions, the Commissioners in presenting the above Scheme to a generous public, feel a confidence of general and universal support and encouragement, but more particularly from their sister States, Pennsylvania, New-York, Delaware and Maryland; who, we may safely say, have never appealed in vain to their sister state of New-Jersey; but on the contrary, have been, and ever will be, generously supported by her, in the like and other improvements.

As to the Scheme, the commissioners have endeavoured to suit it to the circumstances of all The low price of tickets will preclude very few from an opportunity of securing an independence for life, or acquiring a very handsome remuneration for the trifle advanced.

The many rich prizes it contains, with the others, will all be paid without deduction at the Camden Bank, where the money received for the Tickets will be deposited immediately, for the sole use of the Lottery.

Although there are 25 Capital Stationary Prizes amounting to ☞$67,500, one for each drawing day, yet there remain afloat as many large and valuable prizes, amounting to the sum of $152,500, as are generally to be met with in a whole Scheme, and the whole payable without any deduction therefrom. And for the accommodation of the fortunate adventurers in this Lottery, who may wish to receive their money immediately, a provision will be made at the said Bank for the payment of the prizes the VERY DAY they are drawn, on allowing the customary discount, as in Philadelphia or New-York.

The Lottery will be drawn in Camden, opposite the city of Philadelphia, and the Manager flatters himself that such encouragement will be given by a generous public as will enable him in the course of a very few weeks, to announce in the papers of the several states, the day the drawing will commence.

Contractors will be allowed a liberal discount.

Domestic Manufactures.

No. V.

Nothing is more susceptible of proof, than that, in the ordinary concerns of life, men are ready enough to be regulated by their own interests. If a particular business promises great advantages it will be entered into and prosecuted without the interposition of any other authority, than that which is exercised by the hope of emolument. This, it is presumed, is the true meaning of the expression (which is either so little understood or so much perverted) that trade will regulate itself. And what can better regulate the prosperity of any branch of human industry, than the opinions which may prevail with regard to the degree of profit it is capable of affording. It will not be denied, (for it is too well supported by experience, to be rationally controverted) that whenever wealth is anticipated from any species of labour, there will exist a competition which will increase the number of those employed in it, and thus reduce the price of its products to its proper level.

If manufactures are of so fertile a nature as to afford a greater return on the labour and capital vested in them than any other kind of employment, they will be prosecuted with an ardour fully equal to the most sanguine expectations which they can excite. The people of England were doubtless influenced by the same desire to forward their own interests when they first began to turn their attention to the fabrication of woollen goods, which stimulates to industry in every country. But it is fairly presumable, that the prohibitory measures adopted with a view to the encouragement of that description of manufacture, exercised but a very small share of the influence which prompted them to engage in it, compared with the expectation that a more permanent and infinitely more certain encouragement could be derived from a source at once more pure and less subject to exhaustion. That source they anticipated, would be furnished by the general disposition of the people to foster their undertaking, under the impression that it was connected with their own welfare as individuals, and with that of the nation generally. This, if we may deduce any argument from those traits in the human character which are admitted to have an universal existence and operation, was the true cause of the rapid increase of manufactures in England. But this cause was induced by facts of a local nature, and whether the effect which has resulted from it has been productive of ultimate good or evil to those among whom it is visible, will be considered in the progress of the present examination.

With regard to the policy of levying the proposed duties on foreign manufactures, it has been contended by those who are opposed to the measure, that the taxing of a particular species of products for the encouragement of those who are engaged in their manufacture at home is unfair, because the burden of the tax is borne by the many for the benefit of the few. If such be the fact, there can be but one correct course of policy—that of refusing to impose the duties. A correct inference of the truth or falsity of the opinions on the subject may be drawn from a single instance easily understood, and forming in its general consequences the whole effect predicted of the increase in the tariff.

If a duty of two dollars per yard be laid on foreign cloth, for the purpose of furnishing the domestic manufacturer with a home market, will such tax act ultimately to the disadvantage of others not engaged in the same kind of manufacture? Before this tax was imposed, the farmer was able to buy a yard of cloth from the importer for the price of a barrel of flour; now he must give the price of a barrel and a half of flour. But, say some, the advantage of the home market, and the increased demand for his flour owing to the increase of manufacturers will be equivalent to his additional expenditure. But if he could before the existence of this increase in the duties, procure in Europe ten dollars, and at home but six dollars for his barrel of flour, and if after the duties are laid he can obtain at home only an addition of two dollars per barrel, and abroad may have the same price as formerly he is still no gainer, for he will prefer shipping his produce to a foreign market and procuring in exchange the money which will enable him to buy his cloth at home; or he will receive at once, cloth from the foreign merchant.—But as he must give the American manufacturer two dollars more for a yard of cloth than formerly, and as his flour commands no more in Europe than it did before the duties were laid—for every yard of cloth he thus buys at the increased price of eight dollars, he actually loses two dollars. If he buy his cloth abroad, and prefer paying the additional duty of two dollars per yard to buying it at home, supposing him to pay six dollars per yd. (the price he had formerly been accustomed to pay) the whole cost of his cloth will be equal to the price he would otherwise have to give the domestic manufacturer. The latter in this case would lose the whole of the capital expended in the production of the yard of cloth, which he would have sold had its price remained as at first, at six dollars. He not only does not receive the cost of manufacture and material, (which is therefore a dead loss) but the profit on which he depends for support; for as he will give but eight, and the farmer can get abroad ten dollars for a barrel of flour, the foreign manufacturer has the preference, and supplies the place in the home market which the domestic manufacturer would otherwise have held. If at any time the latter agrees to give the same price for the flour which is offered by the foreign merchant, it must be in consequence of an increase in the price of his cloth equal to his additional disbursement.

Thus it will appear very satisfactorily, that the two dollars additional duty would be an actual loss both to the farmer and the manufacturer: for if the farmer can procure more abroad than at home for his produce, he will dispose of it abroad. But as at all events his yard of cloth will still cost him eight dollars, and he could once buy it for six, he pays an additional price of two dollars for which he is not remunerated, and the American manufacturer is a loser of all the cost of material and labour of the yard of cloth, which he had produced under the expectation of finding for it a purchaser at home.

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

SMITHFIELD MEETING.

London, July 21, 3 o'clock, P. M.—This being the day for the Smithfield Meeting for Reform, the streets were thronged, and the houses crowded with spectators. It rained hard. About one o'clock, Mr. Hunt appeared on horseback, preceded by persons bearing flags, with 'Order,' 'Order,' inscribed on them.—Soon after he mounted a wagon, with Preston by his side. He was greeted with acclamations. Though evidently indisposed he addressed. He then proceeded to state the objects of the Meeting.

After the Rev. Mr. Harrison had addressed the meeting, and one of the mob had requested that the resolutions, respecting the Catholics should be put separately, but which Mr Hunt objected to, the resolutions were carried. Four flags were unfurled, on which were inscribed, 'Peace and Good Will,' 'Universal Suffrage,' 'Death or Liberty,' and one tricoloured, 'England, Scotland & Ireland.' This last, Mr. Hunt said, 'we adopt as the Union Flag of Freedom;' but disclaimed the idea of having borrowed it from France. Alluding to the arrest of Wolseley and Harrison, at Manchester, who had obtained bail, Hunt said, it was probable he too would not be forgotten. He therefore begged them to mark what he said and did. 'I will subpœna you all, and with 50,000 of you on my side, what have I to fear? I will summon thirty of you every day, and then I think the trial will go on three years before it be finished.' He exhorted the meeting to behave quietly. The shops were not shut, and business was going on, and every precaution was in activity to prevent or punish disorder.

Postscript. The Rev. Mr. Harrison, who was indicted for sedition, has just been arrested by a special warrant. At three o'clock, when we left the meeting. Dr. Watson was addressing the meeting.

More than 10,000 persons have been sworn in as special constables, to keep the peace.

Lord Sidmouth has addressed circular letters to the lords lieutenants of the Manufacturing counties, directing them to give orders to the yeomanry cavalry to hold themselves in readiness to assist the magistrates in the preservation of the public peace. It is stated that upwards of 120,000 men are enrolled in the Reform Societies in Yorkshire, Lancashire and Cheshire.

The British Parliament have granted 50,000*l.* to aid emigrants to the Cape of Good Hope.

Intelligence has been received in England as late as May from Trivoli, which announces that the most public roads had become no longer safe one mile from the gates of Rome. Seven hundred villains had escaped from the gallies, and spread themselves over the Appenines. This horde of assassins had committed the most horrid crimes, and continue their outrages with impunity. The accounts state that they had lately put out the eyes of an opulent old gentleman at Vallatri, and afterwards hung him, in consequence of their not having received a ransom of 5 or 600 crowns with the punctuality they expected. A child in Rome had his tongue taken out to prevent his telling tales.

CHARACTERISTIC SKETCHES OF GENERAL BOLIVAR.

Extract of a letter from a Paris paper, of June 20.

The Supreme Chief of the Republic of Venezuela, Simon Bolivar, was born at Caraccas, and cannot, by any means, be considered an adventurer. An indefatigable promoter of the liberties of his country for fifteen years past—he takes, at present, the attitude of another Washington. Descended from a noble family, he enjoys a patrimony of 200,000 francks (about $40,000) annual income; part of this estate is now expended upon the success of an enterprize, the first idea of which entered his mind, amid the pleasures of Paris, where he had come for the completion of his education.

For twelve or thirteen years, he was well known in the highest circles of this city. On his arrival, he was twenty-two years of age. He had the Spanish figure; a very agreeable expression; black eyes; lively and ardent; regular features. He was about middle size; expressed himself with great facility; his imagination was brilliant; his character determined, and in nothing has he fallen below his first education. He speaks French as well as an Englishman or Spaniard in general can speak that language. He is active; emulous of gaining instruction, and may be said to be on a level with the science of his age. He attended all the public courses, and initiated himself into all the modern discoveries. He was the intimate friend of the illustrious Humboldt and Bonpland, with whom he travelled a considerable time. To enlarge the sphere of his knowledge, he travelled through England, France, Italy, Switzerland, and a part of Germany. He thus formed his character, and assumed his rank amongst his species; was placed under the auspices of General Miranda, who placed that sword in his hand which he has since managed so well.

The taste and habits of early youth seemed to have designed him for a different career.

The minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Venezuela, Don Pallacis, is an ancient companion and friend of General Bolivar; when in France they lived together.—The minister is himself a cultivated and enlightened man.

From the Catskill Recorder.

The second number of the "Sketch Book," contains, among other articles, "The Broken Heart," from which the following extracts are made. The comparison of the sexes is beautiful, and as far as we know, just: But the female reader will be much better qualified to decide upon its truth or falsity than ourselves. [Editor.

"Man is the creature of interest and ambition. His nature leads him forth into the struggle and bustle of the world. Love is but the embellishment of his early life, or a song piped in the intervals of the acts. He seeks for fame, for fortune, for space in the world's thought, and dominion over his fellow men. But a woman's whole life is a history of the affections. The heart is her world; it is there her ambition strives for empire; it is there her avarice seeks for hidden treasures. She sends forth her sympathies on adventure; she embarks her whole sole in the traffic of affection; and if shipwrecked, her case is hopeless—for it is a bankruptcy of the heart.

"To a man the disappointment of love may occasion some bitter pangs: it wounds some feelings of tenderness—it blasts some prospects of felicity; but he is an active being—he can dissipate his thoughts in the whirl of varied occupation or plunge into the tide of pleasure; or, if the scene of disappointment be too full of painful associations, he can shift his abode at will, and taking, as it were the wings of the morning, can fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, and be at rest.

"But woman's is comparatively a fixed, a secluded, and a meditative life. She is more the companion of her thoughts and feelings; and if they are turned to ministers of sorrow, where shall she look for consolation! Her lot is to be wooed and won; and if unhappy in her love, her heart is like some fortress, that has been captured and sacked, and abandoned and left desolate."

OF THE TARANTULA.

Extract of a letter from Shawanee town dated Aug. 3.

"I cannot conclude this letter without stating to you a fact connected with the history of a certain insect, which seems to put at rest a dispute between the sceptical and the marvelously inclined. I allude to the Aranca Tarantula, or Tarantula Spider, of the order of Aphera; the venom of the bite of which, & the strange effects resulting from it, have been asserted on one side, and strenulously denied, as fabulous on the other. The daughter of Mr. Courney, an English gentleman, who emigrated to this country shortly after Mr. Birkbeck, was bitten by one of these insects, a few weeks ago on the forehead, and died shortly after, under symptoms of the most excruciating pain. The Faculty could afford her no relief, nor the Indians, who, it may be said have an antidote for every other poison. The next day after the bite, the head was swollen to an enormous size, and the whole body became livid, which characteristics remained until she was buried. There can be no doubt as to the identity of the animal with the Aranca Tarantula, and as little with respect to the dreadful effects of its bite; though the assertion, that nothing but the sound of the lute can effect a cure, is certainly most chimerical."

[Our Correspondent, who communicates the above, is very confident, from his own experience, of the good effects of the Plantane, (Plantago) in the bite of venomous animals; it should be applied externally and internally to the wound.]

DISAPPOINTMENT.

It is computed that at least thirty thousand people assembled on the Jersey shore, and the wharves of the city, yesterday afternoon to witness the ascension of an Air Balloon, which had been publicly announced. The multitude, however, were completely disappointed, the projector of the ascent not being able to inflate his æreal chariot. There being strong reasons to believe the whole affair a hoax on the public, it was with difficulty that the crowd were restrained from destroying the Balloon. We understand, that several incisions were made in it with pen-knives.—Philad. Gaz.

Admitting that twenty thousand people crossed and recrossed the Delaware yesterday, the ferriage alone would amount to one thousand five hundred dollars. Had the projector of the ascent any understanding with the proprietors of the steam-boats?—ib.

Ye're time enough, what ails ye all—
The Watchman's scarce begun to bawl,
The drowsiest heads in all the town,
Have in their nightcaps scarce laid down,
To snore till peep of day.—
Come, to anchor bring your bottom,
Such hours were made for slaves, 'Od rot'em!
But we, fat, honest, free and jolly,
May laugh at all such prudent folly,
Yes by Goles,
We're hearty souls,
When pleasures ours who'd think of pain,
We'll drink and smoke and drink again,
And puff our cares away.

The midnight sage may choose to pore,
His musty volumes o'er and o'er,
And think he's amply paid, if fame
Reward him with an empty name,
Perhaps when life is done.
This may be wisdom, but I wot,
Tis of a sort that likes me not;
Give me the kind that twines my brow,
With wreathes of gay enjoyment now.
Yes I faith,
My rosy wreath,
Unlike the author's chaplet light,
May bloom for any other wight,
Or fade when I am gone.

Brisk pleasure's like the sparkling froth,
That proves our Pittsburgh porter's worth,
For should that foam not, mantle quick,
We'd pitch the liquor to old Nick,
Nor think it worth a flea—
And just as flat the sluggish soul,
That shews not with th' inspiring bowl,
The springing froth of mirthful mood,
That opes the heart and warms the blood.
Yes 'tis so,
Fools might know,
Men of sense in frolic hour,
By trusting to the goblet's power,
When all is life and glee.

PITTSBURGH.

Tuesday, Sept. 14, 1819.

A writer who signs himself "Brutus," has been for some months past publishing his lucubrations in the Aurora, to the infinite delight of a certain class of our fellow citizens. Owing to some unaccountable infatuation in the public taste, a considerable portion of the readers of this paper have been in the habit of viewing these numbers as the production of a rare genius, about whom posterity will be as curious as the present age is on the subject of the mysterious Junius. The writer himself bouyed up by the incense which no doubt he frequently hears offered to his pieces, is continuing his communications with the most amusing self-complacency; he

"Assumes the God,
"Affects to nod,
"And seems to shake the spheres!"

He begins to express his fears as Junius did of old, that he shall be made the object of assassination, or possibly the subject of public impeachment. How to account for the puerility or depravity of the public opinion, whose praises have so completely turned the brain of this poor wight of a correspondent, we confess we are at a loss, but certain it is, a more striking specimen of bad style, of diffuse, unconnected reasoning, of unappropriate allusion, and gross figure we never have met with, even in the columns of a newspaper; there is nothing condensed, nothing neat, from beginning to end, and his manner is about as much like that of the polished, epigrammatic, classical Junius, as "we to Hercules." Indeed, every number bears internal proof of being the production of a half read school boy, without judgment, who in attempting the sublime falls into fustian, in venturing on invective becomes a blackguard. No doubt Brutus thinks with honest Bottom, that "he could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split."

"The raging rocks
"With shivering shocks
"Shall break the locks
"Of prison gates
"And Phibbus' car
"Shall shine from far,
And make and mar
"The foolish fates."

We did not however, enter upon the subject of the writings of Brutus on account of the opportunity they afford for the indulgence of criticism or ridicule: in a literary point of view, they are really beneath the notice of even a provincial news-paper; we have been compelled to take notice of this writer in consequence of some wild assertions in his last number, affecting the respectability of our citizens void of foundation in fact, as they are disgusting and ill bred in their dress; even this would not have induced us to notice, had not these pieces appeared in the most conspicuous part of the Aurora, a paper probably of wider circulation than any other in our country.

The numbers of Brutus are entirely devoted to attacking and "unveiling," as he expresses himself, the corruptions of the Bank of the United States. Had he confined himself to these charges, he would have had our hearty approbation; we never doubted the depravity that took place in the original organization of this institution; scepticism itself could not waver. Had he limited himself to the severest animadversions on the conduct of most of the Branches, we should have applauded him, notwithstanding the glaring defects in his style and breeding. But when he associates Pittsburgh with Baltimore and Richmond in the scene of speculation and fraud, which has been carried on, at least, in the second of these places, we cannot forbear protesting against the circulation of so gross a falsehood. He says, in his ranting manner. "to fill the chasm caused by your gaming losses at Baltimore, Pittsburgh & Richmond from January 1819 to January 1820, will require upon a liberal computation, not less than the savings of three years interest, the nett cost produce of your accounts."—Again, "Baltimore, Richmond and Pittsburgh have met the punishment which sooner or later, is sure to overtake villainy."

Is it possible that this man could have received information which would justify such strong language respecting this place? or has he only brought in Pittsburgh for the sake of Euphony, and to round his sentence? in undertaking to controvert these assertions, we must not be viewed as the champions of the Branch Bank of this city; the acting editor of this paper has been for some time an officer in one of those humble state banks located here, which have been obliged to suspend their operations, partly in consequence as it is generally believed of the enormity and influence of this branch; it cannot therefore be presumed to be much devoted to these emanations of the other institution. Neither do we wish the question is not now agitated, to be considered as defending the manner and motions of the loans made by the direction here; our only object is to acquit Pittsburgh of the charge of villainy which has been so brutally lavished on her in the Philadelphia "Aurora." To accomplish this, but a few words are necessary, and we pledge ourselves for their truth and correctness.

In the first place then, the Bank of the United States never has lost a single cent by its loans in Pittsburgh, and there is no danger, no suspicion of a loss in future. We state upon undoubted authority, that the amount of bills discounted, including bills of exchange, does not exceed six hundred and ninety thousand dollars; upwards of four hundred thousand dollars of this sum were discounts transferred from the bank of Pennsylvania when the present Branch bank was located here; of course not more than three hundred thousand dollars have been loaned by the present directors.—About four months since, an order came from the parent board for a uniform curtailment of five per cent; the last discount day was the 15th of this curtailment, and we are informed that only one or two instances have occurred of a failure in complying with this demand. In those cases which have been the subject of vague remark, and they are only two in number as we believe, the bank in granting an extended period for payment, has accepted from its debtors the pledge of a part only of their estates as ample security! Does this seem as if there were danger of this bank suffering by the failure, or the "villainy" of our citizens?—When the whole amount of large possessions were offered, honestly offered by one or two of our townsmen whose enterprise left them embarrassed when the day of our adversity arrived, even the bank, smarting as she must have been under the losses with which she was threatened from other places, was perfectly satisfied with the security of a portion of the offered property. Not a single stock note was ever discounted, for no stock was held here except the amount necessary to enable a citizen to sit as a director; nothing, we candidly believe, was done but upon good personal security, in addition to what may be termed real security, that is the actual proprietaryship on the part of the borrowers of valuable real property. In times of common prosperity, such as Pittsburgh has seen, and such as we confidently believe she will see again, the property of one of the individuals alone upon whom suspicion of failure has fallen, would be amply sufficient to pay the whole amount loaned by the board, in their new capacities of directors of the branch of the United States.

Such is the fair statement of the affairs of this city, to which the term "villainy" has been applied; not a discount has been jeopardized, not a dollar can be lost, and not a fear has been entertained: and yet we have been classed with a set of bankrupts and identified with a scene of knavery unsurpassed since the days of the Mississippi bubble. Adversity has to be sure laid her benumbing hand upon us; the want of good faith on the part of our government has checked in some measure the growth of those establishments which were fast advancing to maturity, and under whose shade, independence would have fixed her favourite residence; individuals who had in full confidence of the implied promise of their government, vested their all in manufactures, have had their means woefully crippled to be sure; but the effect rests upon ourselves; the losses will not extend beyond our own limits; neither the Bank of the United States, nor the Philadelphia or Baltimore merchants, who have dealt with us upon true mercantile principles, will lose a cent. If only two-thirds of the debts due us from the west, and which upon a fair calculation, we had a right to expect, were paid to us, we should neither owe banks nor eastern merchants; as it is, dreadful as is the general embarrassment, we are perfectly solvent, and can pay our debts. Finally, we can assure the moral, patriotic imitator of the invective of Junius, that the amount due the United States Bank is better secured, and the interest better paid than they are in any other institution south of the Connecticut.

SPAIN AND THE U. STATES.

The following is an extract of a private letter from Gibraltar, dated June 23:—

"The American Commodore, in the Franklin, is gone to Cadiz for a few days; perhaps he may have something to say respecting the Florida Treaty, which has not been ratified. This circumstance has certainly given rise to strange rumours. The Marquis (and Marchioness too, who is an American lady) de Irujo has been banished to a miserable village in Old Castile. The reasons assigned for this singular measure are various.—Some say, because he was greatly in favour of the Florida Treaty and the Americans. It indeed appears, he was a great landholder in the Floridas, consequently interested in the success of the treaty, as he would then be able to sell his lands to advantage. Others say, that as Minister of State, he had given, instructions on this subject to M. D'Onis, which his royal master knew nothing about.—For all this, I dare say, there are some grounds, but the fact is, Irujo was not liked by Ferdinand, or his party; he had married an American, the daughter of a strenuous Republican, & is himself well read in Tom Paine, Rousseau and Voltaire.

"Whatever may be the additional reasons, it is confidently believed the treaty which was to cede the Floridas to the United States will not be ratified, or if so, certainly not till the very last moment allowed for the king's acceptance. It is moreover, positively stated, that the British minister, in Madrid, has entered his solemn protest, on behalf of his government to prevent the said cession of the Floridas to the United States, saying, that if they are ceded, England will immediately proceed to acknowledge the independence of the South American states; further urging that if Spain does yield to the pretensions of the United States, in this instance, she may be pressed soon afterwards to give up Mexico to the same grasping ambition. Such are the accounts we have here, and they came from a very good quarter, and in a very straight line. As the term for the exchange of the ratification expires in a few days, we shall soon learn the result, and this will be known here sooner than any where else, in consequence of the presence of the American squadron. It will be a curious circumstance, if these ships, which have been overawing the Barbary states, should now be used to punish the Spaniards. The Americans, who hold possession of the Floridas already, who have bought nearly all the lands held by private individuals, who have received the sovereignty by a formal treaty, and in payment of a debt of 20 years' standing, will never give that country up again, whatever may be the consequence."

MUTINY.

New York, Aug. 30.—About half past eight o'clock last evening, the passengers of the Dutch brig lately from Amsterdam rose upon the crew, when about thirty of them jumped into the boat, and made for the Jersey shore. Murder was cried, and they hailed for a boat, when the cutter's yawl put off, laden with men for the brig. On their arrival they did not find any person materially injured, although some were knocked down. Two of the dutch crew returned to the revenue cutter's boat, and landed at the custom house wharf, to endeavor to obtain a boat to go in search of their own.

DUELS.

We have observed with much regret, the frequent instances of duels in our country, and even in our vicinity. It has been remarked with much truth, that duelling does not import a possession of magnanimity among those concerned. It is in various instances the result of cowardice, and never of a due sense of honour. We have the pleasure to relate an anecdote of the great and good Washington, which explains the definition of true honour, as applied to duelling, and which is most consonant to greatness of soul, real courage and 'honour.'

[Balt Pat.

ANECDOTE OF WASHINGTON.

In 1754, he was stationed at Alexandria with his regiment, the only one in the colony, and of which he was Colonel. There happened at that time to be an election in Alexandria for members of the assembly, and the ballot ran high between col. George Fairfax and Mr. Wm. Elzey. Washington was on the side of Fairfax, and a Mr. William Payne headed the friends of Elzey. In the course of the contest Washington grew very warm, (for his passions, naturally were terrible; though a wise regard to duty, i. e. honour and happiness, soon reduced them to proper command) and unluckily said something to Mr. Payne, who though but a cub in size, was a lion in heart, elevated his shelalah, and at a blow, extended our hero on the ground. News was soon carried to the regiment that their colonel was murdered by the mob! On the passions of the soldiers who doated on their commander, such a report fell at once, like a flash of lightning on a magazine of gunpowder. In a moment, the whole regiment was under arms, and in rapid motion towards the town, burning with vengeance. During this time, Washington had been liberally plied with cold water, acids and volatiles; and happily for Mr. Payne and his party, was so far recovered as to go out and meet his enraged soldiers, who crowded around him with faces of honest joy to see him alive again. After thanking them for such an evidence of attachment to him, he assured them that he was not hurt in the least, and begged them, by their love of him and of their duty, to return peaceably to their barracks. As for himself, he went to his room, generously chastising his passion, which had thus struck out a spark that had like to have thrown the whole town into a flame. And feeling himself the aggressor of Mr. Payne, he resolved to make him the honorable reparation of asking his pardon. No sooner had he made this heroic resolution, than, recovering that delicious gaiety, which ever accompanies good purposes in a virtuous mind, he went to a ball that night, and behaved as pleasantly as though nothing had happened. Early next morning he wrote a polite note of invitation to Mr. Payne, to meet him at the tavern. Payne took it for a challenge, and repaired to the tavern in full expectation of smelling gun-powder. But what was his surprise on entering the chamber, to see, in lieu of a brace of pistols, a decanter of wine and a pair of glasses on the table. Washington rose to meet him, and offering his hand with a smile, began—"Mr. Payne, to err sometimes, is nature, to rectify error, is always glory; I believe I was wrong in the affair of yesterday; you have had I think, some satisfaction, and if you deem that sufficient, here is my hand, let us be friends."

An act of such sublime virtue, produced its proper effect on the mind of Mr. Payne, who from that moment became the most enthusiastic admirer and friend of Washington; and for his sake, ready at any time to charge up to a battery of two and forty pounders.

A a large and respectable meeting of the citizens of Pittsburgh, convened at the house of J. B. Oliver, on Saturday the 24th of July, 1819, for the purpose of forming a Ticket for the approaching Election, on liberal and impartial principles, JOHN DARRAGH, Esq. was called to the Chair, and JAMES M. RIDDLE, appointed Secretary.

Resolved, That this meeting, aware of the delicacy and responsibility of the measure, but knowing that nominations must commence somewhere, take the liberty of recommending the following Ticket for the next Election, to the consideration of their fellow citizens; at the same time they suggest the propriety of the inhabitants of the villages and townships of the county to meet together and put in nomination the names of fit persons to fill any office, in order that the electors may have the greater choice.

JACOB REED.

September 7.

Bank of the United States,

AUGUST 24, 1819.

THE frequent demands made upon the Bank for the payment of its notes on the production of half notes, alledging the loss of the corresponding halves; and the liability to impositions and fraudulent practices to which it is exposed by paying such claims, from which it is advised it cannot be duly protected by any evidence which may accompany such claims or any security which may be given to indemnify it, render it necessary to refuse the payment of such demands. They grow out of the voluntary act of the party who separates the parts of the notes, and he alone ought to bear the inconveniences and losses consequent upon the act. But as the practice, however improper, has been a common one, and the Bank is unwilling, without apprizing the public of its intention, to withhold even a questionable claim upon it, these demands will be meet with as usual heretofore, until the 1st of November next. But is hereby given, that the Bank of the United States will not after the first of November next, hold itself responsible upon any of its notes, which shall be voluntarily cut into parts, except on the production of all the parts.

Notice

By order of the Board of Directors.
